

My satellite radio is on in my house from 8:00 AM until 6:00 PM each day. Then I watch the news on TV. When I am in my car for any distance drive, I take my satellite radio with me. I know the stations and like the choices. As I do significant travelling, the ability to listen to different urban traffic and weather is advantageous. I don't have to drive into an area and search for some local station that might give me traffic or weather on the 8's or whenever they might choose.

I can't imagine that a paying customer of satellite radio shouldn't receive more capability as the satellite broadcasts come of age. I would rather pay than listen to a urban station as I drive through, only to lose it in 20 miles.

I totally support local information from satellite radio. I am available for questions.
